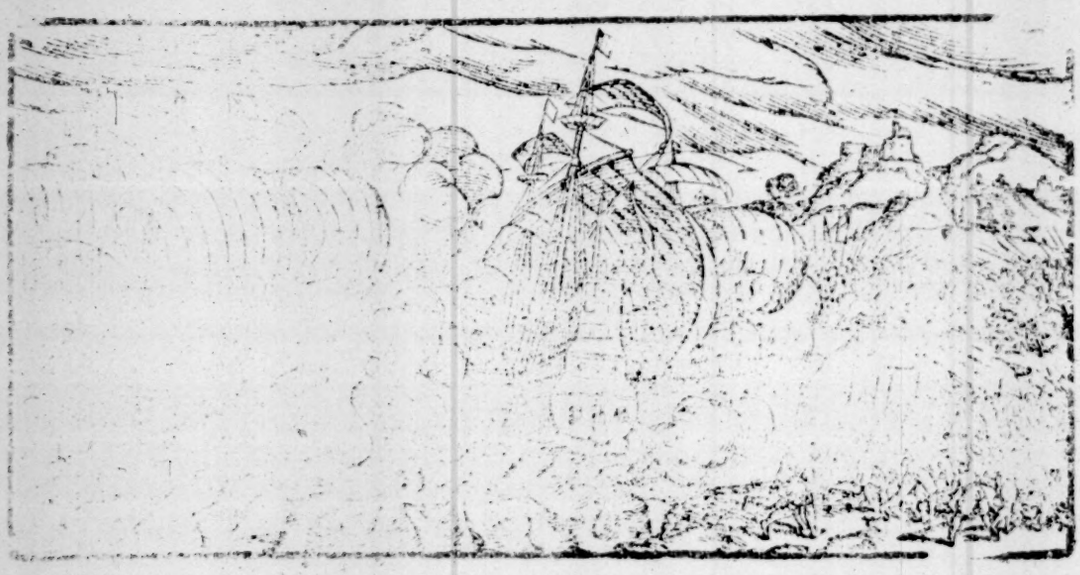
Gallants, to Bohemia.

Or, Let vs to the Warres againe: Shewing the forwardnesse of our English Souldiers, both in times past, and at this present.

To a pleasant new Warlike tune.



YOu noble Britaines, braue and free,
Resolu'd with speed vpon the shore:
You that haue sense to hold and know,
Great honour by true valour gotten:
Large Crownes with Conquest to be won,
Let no man sit at home at ease,
Let vs to the warres againe.

Be bold Commanders of the Land,
and Souldiers all of euery sort,
Both all more forward to the Seas,
and take on Land no long farewell:
For Drums and Trumpets sweet sounds
to call you to the field will cease:
Therefore now speed you while you may,
Then let vs to the warres againe.

Come Sea-men all, your Ships prepare,
And with your Ordnance guard the shore,
Our Land-Souldiers shall scale the walles,
and bold fight vnto the last:
Whereby we shall be sure of victory,
Then let vs to the warres againe.

Braue and stout minded Gentlemen,
that great Captaines would about,
vnknowne Lands to find out:
That Indian Pearles and Jewells store,
may decke them bravely on the shore:
Away then Gallants, leave amaine,
And let vs to the warres againe.

Braue Souldiers in forreigne Lands to shine,
for the Eyes do beare on them:
Gaine great riches, Pearle and Gold,
by fighting Villanous Spaniards and Rebels:
Of a mixed sort beside,
to the Kingdome of Heaven conuerted,
The true Religion to maintaine,
Come let vs to the warres againe.

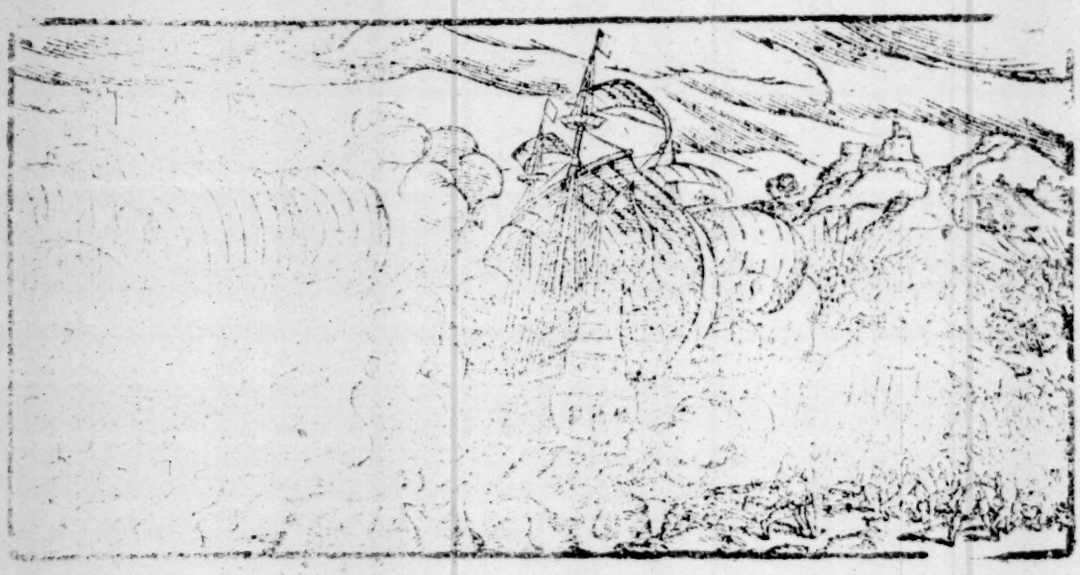
In fair Virginia, where we first began,
a Country rich while we it had long:
Which if we may this valour true,
Spanish pride from the field will flye:
Neuer shall we be found,
that English Dastards stood afraide:
Of such aduentures would refraine,
Then let vs to the warres againe.

Of late we had within our Land,
a noble number of command:
Of gallant Leaders braue and bold,
that almost all the world controld:
As Drake, Cumberland and Darcie,
which made both Sea and Land to shake.
The Indies diuers to obtaine,
Then let vs to the warres againe.

Gallants, to Bohemia.

Or, Let vs to the Warres againe: Shewing the forwardnesse of our English Souldiers, both in times past, and at this present.

To a pleasant new Warlike tune.



YOu noble Britaines, braue and free,
Resolu'd with speed vpon the shore:
You that haue sense to hold and know,
Great honour by true valour gotten:
Large Crownes with Conquest to be won,
Let no man sit at home at ease,
Let vs to the warres againe.

Be bold Commanders of the Land,
and Souldiers all of euery sort,
Both all more forward to the Seas,
and take on Land no long farewell:
For Drums and Trumpets sweet sounds
to call you to the field will cease:
Therefore now speed you while you may,
Then let vs to the warres againe.

Come Sea-men all, your Ships prepare,
And with your Ordnance guard the shore,
Our Land-Souldiers shall scale the walles,
and bold fight vnto the last:
Whereby we shall be sure of victory,
Then let vs to the warres againe.

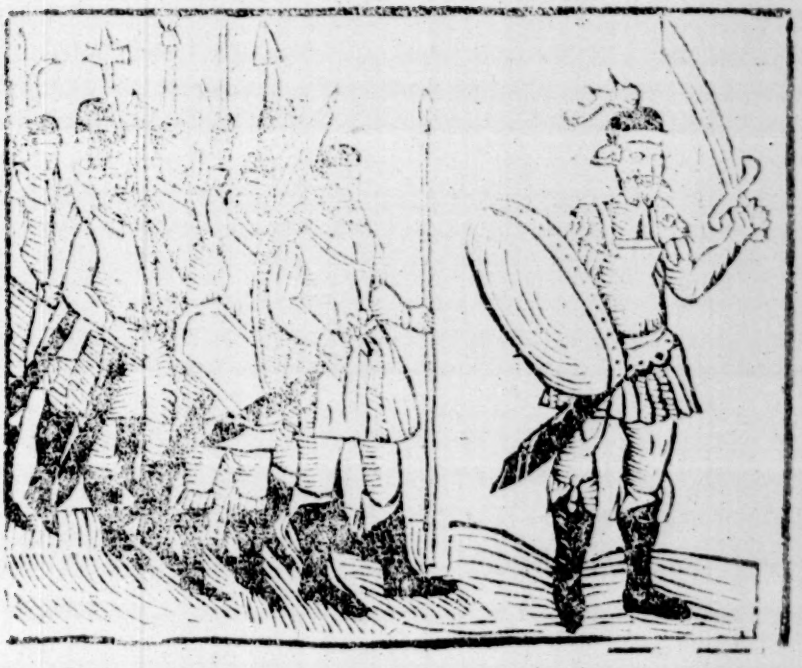
Braue and stout minded Gentlemen,
that great Captaines would about,
vnknowne Lands to find out:
That Indian Pearles and Jewells store,
may decke them bravely on the shore:
Away then Gallants, leave amaine,
And let vs to the warres againe.

Braue Souldiers in forreigne Lands to shine,
for the Eyes do beare on them:
Gaine great riches, Pearle and Gold,
by fighting Villanous Spaniards and Rebels:
Of a mixed sort beside,
to the Kingdome of Heaven conuerted,
The true Religion to maintaine,
Come let vs to the warres againe.

In fair Virginia, where we first began,
a Country rich while we it had long:
Which if we may this valour true,
Spanish pride from the field will flye:
Neuer shall we be found,
that English Dastards stood afraide:
Of such aduentures would refraine,
Then let vs to the warres againe.

Of late we had within our Land,
a noble number of command:
Of gallant Leaders braue and bold,
that almost all the world controld:
As Drake, Cumberland and Darcie,
which made both Sea and Land to shake.
The Indies diuers to obtaine,
Then let vs to the warres againe.

The ſecond Part. To the ſame tune.



The Norriſſes, and noble Veere,
and Sidnies fameus many yeares:
The Willoughby and worthy Gray, that ſerued all for royall pay:
Poor England famous euery where,
to ſuch as dio their fortunes beare:
Then let vs not at home remaine,
But Brauely to thoſe warres againe.

Gilbert, Hawkins, Forbiſher,
and golden Cauendiſh, Englands ſtarre:
With many a knight of noble worth,
that compaſſe round the circled earth:
Haue left examples here behinde,
the like whereof hereafter to finde:
The which to follow and maintaine,
Come, let vs to thoſe warres againe.

Let be no more ſit ſtaffing them but thoſe that like braue Cauliphants Whoſe fames great Monarchies from to be the onely men of warre:
The braues of Europe all amaid, forth hither come their foes to ſlay:
Let bullets come and ſhot as raine,
We'el brauely to thoſe warres againe.

Bohemian Drums and Trumpets call,
a Summons to be Soulders all:
Then it be well from ſuch ſeruice dye,
where Princes beare the company,
To arme, to arme all Europe ſings,
the cauſe is iuſt, we fight for Kings,
The which moſt brauely to maintaine,
Come let vs to thoſe warres againe.

The Germane States, and Netherlands
haue muſtred vp their martiall bands:
The Denmarke King doth hether combine his forces to the Palatine:
With three hundred Princes more,
five Dukes, Earles and Barons ſtore:
Then how can we at home remaine,
But brauely to thoſe warres againe.

The Seas with ſhips are richly ſtored,
the Land with colours white and red:
And euery Captaine ready preſt,
to ranke his ſquadrons with the reſt:
The Martiall muſicke rattling ſounds, ſaues Soldiers, ſtand & keep your grounds
Though burning bullets flye amaine,
Yet will we to thoſe warres againe.

Our Leaders noble minded are,
for to maintaine ſo braue a warre
For this, for true Religions right, to ſpend their liues in bloudy fight For God and for his Goſpel, then to armes, and fight it out like men,
The which moſt brauely to maintaine,
Let vs go to the warres againe.

And let vs all that Soulders be,
both noble bloud and low degree:
Be true to him that takes in hand
theſe popiſh kingdomes to withſtand God guide him on with good ſucceſſe, and all his noble army bleſſe:
And ſo we ſhall the right maintaine,
And go into theſe warres againe.

Imprinted at London by G. E.